Work Comfortably, Work Productively, Wherever You Are

Office

When we return to the office there will be some disruption to how we used to work.

In the interests of safety and cleanliness, employees should have their own desks and have their own peripherals to take home at the end of the day to maintain maximum hygiene.

Home

The majority have become used to working from home, however are only working with the essentials.

Now is the time to take the next step and ensure the home office is set up to be as comfortable and productive as the head office.

Mobile

As working adjusts to the new normal, restrictions will ease and workers will be allowed to work in more varied locations, working wherever there's a WiFi connection.

Therefore it's important for organisations to supply products that can be moved between work and home, such as luggage and wellbeing.

Work Is No Longer A Place You Go - It's What You Do

Around the globe, workers are gearing up to return to the office and 'the new normal'. However, what exactly that entails for every organisation will vary and likely depend on regional governments and health agency guidelines.

Executives will have to implement controls and precautions that allow employees to return to the office safely. These considerations will include the layout of offices, providing employees their own personal accessories and protecting personal desk space.

As life adjusts to the new normal, the routines you've come accustomed to will again face disruption. To make the transitions between the office or home as seamless as possible, Kensington provide a complete range of solutions to maintain and enhance productivity and wellbeing, wherever you are working.
